RAMPART CAVE FIRE

Fabulous Folks

From Meadview Monitor NOV/DEC 1976

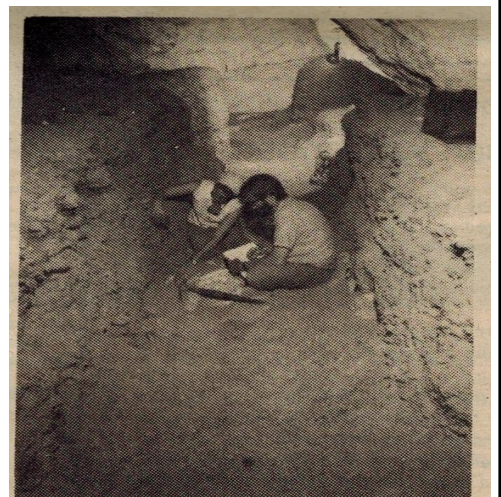

GIANT GROUND SLOTHS believed to have occupied "Rampart Cave" some 10,000 years ago

Some 40,000 years ago, a rather large animal (approximately the size of a present day grizzly bear) with coarse, quite long hair, red-brown in color, moved very slowly toward the cave entrance. He and others of his kind, along with packrats, bats, and other small animals, called this cave home. The area around the cave was covered with a woodland of juniper, single leaf ash, and a variety of other trees, plants, and shrubs which no longer grow in the vicinity. About 8,500 years ago, this vegetation disappeared, and today is found much higher elevation further to the north and much further up stream to the east on the great river which still flows nearby. This big hairy animal and its descendants, known as Shasta Ground Sloth, occupied this cave for the next 8,000 years, then for some unknown reason they appear to have abandoned it for a period of some 19,000 years, only to return again for another interlude of some 2,000 years. This cave, located a few short miles inside the western end of the Grand Canyon, is known today by two names: Rampart Cave and Sloth Cave. Presently the cave is about 750 ft above the level of the Colorado River. During the 19,000 year absence of the Ground Sloth at Rampart Cave, Wood Rats (Pack Rats), Tortoises, Chuck-Walla and an extinct species of mountain goat (Oreamnos Harringtoni) made their homes in cave, along with the bats and rodents. Marmots also lived here at one time, but in 1976 they are to be found in forest areas above 8,000 ft.

ed with the last glacial period in the northern hemisphere. Wood Rats and bats, however, continued to live in the cave, as they have the past 40,000 years or more. They are still living there today, or we should say there were, up to the time our story starts. Around 13,000 years ago, the Ground Sloth returned to the cave for another 2,000 years or so, then for some unknown reason, became an extinct species. Probably due to the hunters of that period, around the 9,000 BC. During these thousands of years of occupation, the cave filled to a depth of many feet with animal droppings. Through the carbon dating techniques, various layers or deposits have established a time frame of animal occupancy. Analysis of the dung gives scientists some idea of the type of vegetation growing in the area at various stages of the time frame. Bits of vegetation hauled in by the Wood rats provided further information. The cave truly has been quite a resource, one of which may be destroyed shortly. Some years ago the National Park service built a steel gate at the entrance of the cave in an effort to keep out those who might damage or destroy the site. A sign was installed stating that entry was permitted only by special authorization. On Wednesday, July 14th, fire was discovered in the cave. Someone had pried the bars apart far enough to gain entry and either through accident or "pure cussedness" had built a fire some 150ft or so back in the cave. The dung, caught fire, and so far as it is definitely known, may still be burning—how deep and how far it has spread under the top layer, no one knows at present. Doctors Austin Long & Tom Van Devender, of the university of Arizona, are among the crew of men and women fighting the fire. I asked them what the plan was for, hopefully, putting out the fire. In Dr Long's words, "We're not sure what they're (National Park Service) going to do. What they're doing now stirring it with shovels. At this point (July 23rd) they're still trying to determine the extent of the fire—they have learned a lot about it in the last two days, but they're not sure where the edges are. I think the first thing they are going to try is to determine that. There is a lot of intense heat and steam back in there right now. They spray water on an area suspected of burning, and if they get steam coming up, they figure, of course, that "its burning." Inside the cave, breathing is a problem. As Dr. Long states, "It's rough from two points of view. They have to wear cumbersome breathing apparatus, and then it is so very hot. There are dangerous gases in there. You could not go in without apparatus. Carbon monoxide is one of the gases. Steam is present. It is so hot it essentially boiling the men who are working in there right now." Mr. Gary David, mining inspector for the U.S. Bureau of Mines, a mining specialist, ran tests which revealed the existence of dangerous gases just inside the cave entrance sufficient to render a man unconscious within 3 hours and which would cause death within 5 hours continuous exposure. Despite this, some of the firefighters spent 8 hours per day in this area without special breathing apparatus. Fighting this fire has been like no other in the N.P.S. experience, according to N.P.S. Ranger, Ed Hedden. First off, the cave entrance is some 750ft above the Colorado River, as mentioned earlier. The extremely steep trail to the cave entrance is near 1500ft in length, so steep one must use both hands and feet to make progress over a portion of it. Supplies, equipment, and personnel had to be transported to the site by helicopter, which sat down on a small leveled area prepared by the firefighters. Other than by air, there is really only one way to the site.—that's on the river. Getting men and equipment to the cave in this manner would have been too time consuming. Water was pumped part way up the river. Large containers were filled at this point, then the helicopter would lift the load to the cleared area. From there it had to be carried on up to the cave by men. Before going into the cave, the men had to put on self-supporting breathing apparatus. Then the water was carried into the fire zone, where it was sprayed on the burning area. Special hoses were installed to exhaust smoke and gases from the cave, and lights were set up inside. Generators down near the river's edge provided power for the fans, lights, pumps, and other equipment. The fight went on for 8 days, until suddenly on July 22nd the roof of the cave started falling in, believed to be the result of heat and steam. Falling rocks cut one of the air hoses being used inside the cave, and several pieces of fire-fighting equipment were lost in the cave-ins. Mr. David, the mining inspector, checked the cave interior shortly after the initial rock fall and discovered numerous sections of the roof which were ready to fall at any time. So, on July 23rd, 10 days after discovery of the fire, the cave was considered unsafe for the fire fighters to enter, and the fire fighting phase, as such came to an end. A couple more days of work could possibly have seen the end of the fire, but that was not to be. A decision was then made to construct an airtight bulkhead at the entrance to cut off the air to the interior. An airlock was installed to allow entry if needed, and gauges were mounted in the bulkhead for use in monitoring conditions inside. Mr. Dave Steigelmeyer, of the Grand Canyon Fire dept., was in charge of the fire fighting effort. Mr. Ed Hedden, National Park Service Ranger stationed at Meadview assisted the fire crew. Other National service Park service personnel involved were Mr. Richard Baars, James Stanley III, Alan Foster, Scott Thybony, David Mathiesen (helicopter pilot), and N.C. Johns, MD. Mrs. Patti Hedden of Meadview also assisted. Volunteers from the University of Arizona were Dr. Austin Long and his wife, Karen, Dr. Paul Martin, and Dr. Tom Van Devender. Five volunteer members from the Lake Mohave Fire Dept. in Bullhead City, AZ, drove the 100 plus miles to Meadview to help the battle. Some of these men got off work at 3am and were on there way by 4am to spend a grueling day at or in the cave. I'm sorry I don't have the names of these meant to publish here. The Lake Mohave Fire dept. also furnished fans and other equipment for use on the fire. All these people deserve a huge vote of thanks for their efforts. Scientists, including those from the University of Arizona, the National Science Foundation, The Smithsonian Institute, and others, consider this cave to be an archeological treasure trove of the Pleistocene Geological period. Our thanks to Doctors Austin Long, Paul Martin and Tom Van Devender, of the Dept. of Geosciences, University of Arizona, and to Karen Long, for the historical data and for some of the pictures and the other information used in this article. Thanks also to N.P.S. Ranger Ed Hedden for information on the fire fighting details. Now as of September 25th, a check of the gauges at the bulkhead seems to indicate that the fire is completely out. To further assure that the fire is completely extinguished, the cave will be left sealed and undisturbed for the next 90 days. Hopefully by that time, all remnants of the fire will be extinguished, and the cave may once again be explored by those qualified and authorized to do so.

The nearest Marmot habitation today is in the Beaver Dam Mountains of Utah. They are no longer found in Arizona. The Ground Sloth probably left the region around the year 30,000BC due to the cold weather associat-

IN MEMORY OF EARNEST JR. WILLIAMS
(ERNIE, JR, BILL)

Ernest Jr. Williams, (Ernie, Jr., Bill) of Meadview City Arizona was born July 16th, 1933, on the family farm in Jake's Prairie, Missouri (near Cuba), to Ernest E. Williams, and Ruth (Enloe) Williams. He passed away on May 8th, 2018 at Kingman Regional Hospital and Trauma Center. Ernest attended school and grew up in Jakes Prairie until the family sold the farm and moved into Cuba. There he attended High School graduating at age 17. He then joined the Navy, July 27th, 1950 serving with Task Force 77 during the Korean conflict.

Ernest was very proud of being a Korean War Veteran. He did one cruise aboard the Cruiser, USS Helena (CA-75), and 3 cruises on board the Destroyer USS Hubbard, (DD748). While Serving as Damage Control on board the Hubbard off the Coast of Korea he was involved in the recovery and securing of the USS Walke (DD723) when it was damaged by either a mine or torpedo. In the 4 years of his enlistment he achieved the rank of Petty Officer Second Class. While serving in the Navy he met the love of his life Gracemarie Doerr, in Long Beach, California. After a whirlwind courtship, they were married in Yuma Az. on May 30, 1953.

At the end of his enlistment Ernest left the Navy in 1954 and he and Gracemarie returned to Edgerton Wisconsin. In the next five years they were blessed with 4 sons. Here he became known as Bill. Ernest initially worked as an apprenticed type setter for the White-water Daily and the Jefferson County Union. He then worked for Gullixson heating and cooling as a Sheetmetal worker for several years achieving his journeymen status, before being employed by General Motors (Fisher Body) as a Jig and Fixture Journeymen. He was a member of the Local 95 and the VFW post 2708 as well as Troop leader for Cub Scout Troop 418.

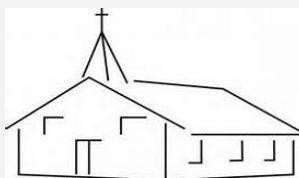

In 1969 Ernest and family moved to Quartz Hill in Southern California where Ernest was employed by Lockheed Martin as Jig and Fixture Journeymen on the L1011 project at the Palmdale California Plant. From there Ernest went back to the Sheetmetal trade. The trade eventually moved the family to Phoenix Arizona. He worked on many projects throughout the western states including power plants at Page Az., the nuclear plants at San Clemente Ca. and Palo Verde in Az. among others.

Ernest and Grace retired to Meadview City in Northern Arizona in 1996 where they became involved in the local community, Ernest working as a volunteer with the local Fire Department (Grapevine Mesa). He was a member of the VFW 11014 post in Meadview where he held many positions including Post Commander. He later moved his membership to Dolan Springs Post 9833 and joined the American Legion post 88 also in Dolan Springs.

He is survived by his sons John (Jennifer) of Janesville Wi., Stephen of Seligman, Az, Kenneth, Wade (Cherie) of Buckeye AZ, David, Scott (Donna) of Phoenix Az., Numerous Grand Children, Great Grand Children and Great, Great Grand Children.

Ernest was preceded in death by his Parents, his wife Gracemarie (Doerr) Williams, his brother Floyd Williams, Sister in Law Ruby (Dickens) Williams, his Sister Grace (Williams) Spurgeon and Brother in Law Charles Spurgeon.

A family gathering and Memorial service is planned with burial in the National Cemetery at Prescott Az. at a future date.

EXPLORERS AND OVER THE HILL HIKERS

By Suzann Newell

The trip to Windy Point was a wild and woolly ride. You take Big Wash Road, into the mountains behind Chloride and go up and around, the mountain, in fact maybe three or four mountains but it is a good dirt road a bit rocky but with fantastic scenery. Yellow blooming prickly pear cactus, blooming manzanita, wild rosemary bushes, wild spirea bushes in bloom, etc., the view from some of the curves to the northeast is the Red Lake area. The view to the right of the road is a beautiful canyon that drops down 600 foot. The cliffs along the road to the left are rugged, layered shale, granite, some red, tan, or brown covered with a thick layer of bushes and cactus.

The picnic and camping area has huge rocks that are piled upon each other, the pinyon pines are tall and heavy with cones, the camp spots are beautiful. The elevation is 6,000 and the breeze is cool, perfect for summer picnics. We decided to take the back road down to the Murals after two people recently told us the road had been graded and was in good shape. They lied!

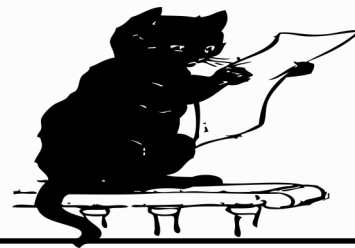

It started out a bit rocky, and immediately we were forced to the outside of the curve by 8 or 10 huge boulders that had broken out of the cliff above to neatly block the road. We forged ahead. The road was too narrow to turn around on we went. The road stayed narrow, the rocks were many, the view on the cliff side was steep, the road was gouged into drop-offs of 1 foot, and sometimes 2 foot deep, at one hairpin curve, the canyon was probably 500 feet straight down, but tire tracks showed others had gone down so we continued, hoping the road would improve. Nope. Eventually the road did level out a bit, and got wider and the rocks smaller and suddenly, there were the murals! Civilization! At least Chloride style. Wow! A fun trip and we all made it in one piece with no flats or hangs ups on the rocks.

MCA members are invited to attend our regular meetings and help us plan new adventures. Our next meeting will be September 12, 6:30 p.m. in the MCA auditorium.

Hope to see you.....

FRIENDS OF THE ARIZONA JOSHUA TREE FOREST

By Pam Steffen

Did you know that the northeastern border of the Grapevine Mesa Joshua Trees Forest borders the West Wall of Grand Canyon National Park?

The Grand Canyon National Monument was established in 1908 by President Theodore Roosevelt using the Antiquities Act. The Grand Canyon fills me with awe," Roosevelt stated. "It is beyond comparison! beyond description; absolutely unparalleled throughout the wide world? Let this great wonder of nature remain as it now is. Do nothing to mar its grandeur, sublimity and loveliness. You cannot improve on it. But what you can do is to keep it for your children, your children's children, and all who come after you, as the one great sight which every American should see.

After a generation-long effort, on June 8, 1906, President Theodore Roosevelt signed the Antiquities Act into law, thus establishing the first general legal protection of cultural and natural resources in the United States. The Antiquities Act stands as an important achievement in the progress of conservation and preservation efforts in the United States. Its effects are still felt. Today, many different organizations cooperate in diverse partnerships including governments at the Federal, state, tribal and local levels; professional and scholarly groups; and communities. In shaping public policy to protect a broad array of cultural and natural resources, the impact of the Antiquities Act is unmatched.

16 Presidents of both parties have since utilized this act to designate national monuments and share the stories of America with future generations. Without the Antiquities Act these national treasures would not be protected today. June 8th, marked the 112th anniversary of this important law. Please help us in celebrating the importance of the Antiquities Act for all Americans. Help us preserve our national treasures.
