“Meet and Play at the MCA”

PRESIDENT’S LETTER TO THE MEMBERS

Dear MCA Members

The hot weather is behind us and the cooler days and evening are here to enjoy. This is the time of year to start planning for the holidays ahead. Halloween was Wednesday October 31st and the MCA sponsored Trunk or Treat. This is a safe way for the local youngsters to wear their scariest costumes and get their treats. It took place in the MCA parking lot where the kids can go car (or truck) to car and gather treats. Many adults wear their own costumes and decorate the rear of their vehicles to pass out treats to the kids. The mystery sheriff was there passing out Hot Wheel cars, while Nancy Stone and Terry King offered cocoa and coffee in the auditorium. It was a safe time for everyone. November brings Thanksgiving. The MCA does not have any plans to sponsor a Thanksgiving Potluck this year. We will be holding a Thanksgiving Craft Fair. We hope all of you enjoy spending the holiday with your family.

December is everyone's busiest month. Skip Torngren has for many years put on the best Christmas light display on his Meadview property. He generally starts several months ahead of time so it is completed before Christmas and I don't know of anyone who was in Meadview for the Christmas holiday and hasn't driven by his property to enjoy the display. (Good News/Bad News) Bad news is Skip has decided to retire from doing his magnificent light display. Good news is Skip has offered to donate much of his collection to the MCA. Darrel Young, MCA's maintenance person and Skips step-son are working to add more electric outlets along the Meadview Blvd fence line. Darrel and Skip will be working on a much larger display at the MCA. Just to remind everyone December 15th is the home decoration tour. This is where groups go on an evening tour of various light displays in Meadview. For information or to join the list of homes to be viewed please contact Jack or Suzann Newell @ 928-564-2213. The tour will be ending at the MCA for hot cocoa or coffee.....See you there!

There are no plans for New Years Eve, but I am sure that several of our local business are holding events. Lets all have a great time as the year winds down and drive safely, the life you save may be mine.

Raymond Stone

Lake Mead Water Levels Fine for Now, but Cutbacks Could Be Coming as Soon as 2020

By Associated Press August 20 2018 01:45

At a Glance

*A key reservoir for the U.S. Southwest and Mexico will be able to provide the necessary water for at least 13 more months.

*But by the start of 2020, Lake Mead's water levels could be so low that cutbacks might become mandatory.

*This is adding pressure for officials to develop a contingency plan for a possible water shortage.

Officials say they're not concerned about water levels on a key Colorado River reservoir for the next year-plus, but an expected shortage could force cutbacks as soon as 2020.

An extended forecast from the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, paired with previous warnings, all point to the same reality for Lake Mead: prolonged dry periods and rising demand could drain so much water from the reservoir that mandatory cutbacks might become necessary. This adds pressure to the seven U.S. states that rely on the Colorado River to come up with a plan to deal with a possible shortage.

"If these projections materialize, we're very quickly going to lose control of how to manage the deteriorating conditions on the Colorado River," said John Entsminger, general manager of the Southern Nevada Water Authority, which serves 2.1 million people, including the city of Las Vegas.

(MORE: Here's What 30 Years of Change Along a River Looks Like)

The Colorado River system — including the giant Lake Mead and Lake Powell reservoirs — serves about 40 million people and 6,300 square miles of farmland. Arizona, California, Colorado, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming rely on the river, along with Native American reservations and northwestern Mexico. The water is divided under international treaties, court rulings and interstate agreements. If there's not enough water to go around, Mexico, Arizona and Nevada would be the first to see their shares reduced.

The Bureau of Reclamation forecast says all the users will get their usual share through September 2019. But the report projects that by October 2019, the surface of Lake Mead could fall below 1,075 feet above sea level, the agreed-upon point that would trigger an announcement of cutbacks that would go into effect in 2020. The bureau operates on a water year that runs from October through September, tied to the cycle of winter snow and spring runoff.

"If everything holds true and the hydrology matches the models, then that's probably where we're going to be," agency spokesman Marlon Duke said.

The chances of a shortage in late 2019 remain at 52 percent, the same odds the bureau announced in May, he said. Lake Mead has never had a shortage and if next winter provides enough snow in the mountains that feed the river, it could be averted, Duke said.

"It really depends on what kind of snowpack and precipitation we get across the basin throughout the coming winter," he said.

(MORE: Here's Why Extreme Heat Is Even More Likely the Next 4 Years)

The Colorado River states agreed to come up with contingency plans to conserve water and avoid mandatory cutbacks in the event of a shortage. But negotiations have been slow and difficult, in part because Arizona's largest river users are still trying to agree on a unified state position, water experts said.

"Right now the thing that's holding it up is Arizona and the inability to come together," said John Fleck, director of the University of New Mexico's Water Resources Program. "The whole system is at risk."

A spokeswoman for the Central Arizona Project, the state's largest water supplier, declined to comment. Officials of the Arizona Department of Water Resources did not immediately respond to an email seeking comment.

The Bureau of Reclamation dates the Colorado River region's drought to 2000, but a small group of academics called the Colorado River Research Group said the river might be experiencing a longer-term shift to a more arid climate.

"Perhaps the best available term is aridification, which describes a period of transition to an increasingly water-scarce environment," the group said in a March paper.

The bureau report underscores the underlying problem that Southwestern states face, said Jennifer Pitt, director of the Audubon Society's Colorado River Program.

The demand exceeds the supply, she said. "Anyone who has managed a bank account for families knows that over time, that spells disaster."

GATHERING OF THE YULE TREE

BY FRED WILSON

Each December, Dale Smith, the owner of the Diamond Bar Ranch allows our Civic Association to cut a pinion pine tree on ranch property. The cutting of the trees on BLM land is a NO-NO. The tree hunting group met on the morning of December 16th. The group consisted of Ralph and Eleanor Browning, Dick and Hilda Kokesh, Glen and Yvonne Larson, John and Dorothy Bridgewater plus Edith and I. The party of four rigs proceeded to the ranch building where ranch personnel were informed of our purpose. They appreciate knowing who is on the property and for what purpose. There have been instance where person(s) have shot horses, cows and also punctured water tanks. We reached an area about 23 miles from Meadview where trees have been cut for previous Christmases. After a bit of walking from the Grapevine Canyon road, the group agreed on a tree Yvonne Larson had spotted. A trip to the overlook was made after lunch.

On the way back the tree would be cut. Weather-wise, a better day could not have been picked. The day before yon, AZ. Sheet of the USGS series for Arizona near the intersection of sections 22, 23, 26, and 27. The view from the overlook was magnificent on a clear, cloudless day. CB radio contact was made with Ironwood (Duane Johnson). Flashing mirrors were easily seen at there were high winds with accompanying dust. The day after there was some rain. The Bridgewaters, here for a few weeks from Gibson City, Illinois had not been to the overlook. The overlook is 33 miles from Meadview by road. The line-of-sight distance to the Civic center is about 6 miles. The overlook can be located on the Grapevine Canthe Civic Center. On the way back we stopped at an Arizona Game and Fish Department wild game watering hole. A collector about 20 to 30 feet made from corrugated sheet steel is placed on the ground to allow condensate to collect on the underside and be funneled to a central trough. The trough is pitched at an angle to collect in a small basin. When there is rainfall the water runs across the top of the sheets and into the trough. The unit is surrounded by a barbed fence to exclude cattle from the basin. Deer easily jump the fence to reach the basin. Smaller animals go under the wire. The tree was erected and trimmed on the 17th. It turned out to be an excellent choice.

John Bridgewater, Fred Wilson cut Christmas tree as Kokesh and Glen Larson supervise.

EXPLORERS AND OVER THE HILL HIKERS

By Suzann Newell

Brrr!
 What happened to Fall???

The picnic at the Rafters Ramp and the hike to the Pearce Ferry Rapids was a bit cool, the trip to Chloride to watch the parade and the gun fighters was just a bit chilly, but the trash pickup between milepost 21 and 23 was just right for hiking.

We plan a drive off Stockton Hill Road to the west into the Cerbat Mountains. Our regular meeting Nov. 14 will be planning our Christmas Pot Luck dinner plus a few hikes and trips if we aren't bucking snow drifts. All MCA members are welcome to attend the meeting and any of our events. We meet in the MCA auditorium at 6:30 the second Wednesday of each month.

Hope to see you there.

QUAIL NEWS

By Club Reporter, Carole Duran

The Quail Club program for November 13th will be held at the MCA at 10:00 am and the speakers will be Joelle Acton and Carrie Wolstal from BLM. The program is BLM Wildlife Management and Enforcement.

The challenge for Quail members is to bring canned goods and staples for the VFW Thanksgiving baskets.

The December 11th Quail meeting held at the MCA at 10:00 am will be a potluck and Cookie Walk (bring 3 dozen cookies to participate). The challenge for the Quail members is to dress Christmassy and bring unwrapped toys for VFW distribution.

You don't have to be a member of the Meadview Quail Club to attend Quail meetings. Hope to see you there.
